EAST OF THE WATER PLUG

By Mack Sennett.

Harold Graves, a small town Romeo, believes himself an actor. He belongs to the amateur theatrical troop and they stage a performance in the local town hall. Harold, garbed in tights and posing as a rescuer of damsels in distress, is doing nicely with his role until the property man gets all mixed up with his guy ropes behind the scenes. Graves pretending not to notice what is going on attempts to carry out his part of the performance but the many funny happenings which transpire cause the audience to laugh heartily and Harold has to make a hasty and rather undignified exit.
